UNUSUAL BARN IN THE COUNTY

Circular Structure of Sheeley Brothers near Cashtown has Largest Self-Supporting Roof in U. S. Lake on Lawn Attractive.

Residents of the county will be surprised to learn that one of our own farms contains the most remarkable structure of its kind in the United States, in the barn built during the past Summer near Cashtown by Sheeley Brothers.

Fire of incendiary origin destroyed the enormous barn that housed the crops of these progressive farmers on the night of last December 7th and they at once began a search for the style building that would be best adapted to their needs. They were more or less familiar with the type of circular barns built in the central west and knew it was possible to construct a building of this sort with approximately a saving of 22 per cent. in material over the customary oblong barn of equal cubic capacity. A study of the circular barns already built showed them some faults in each that should be corrected. Correspondence with the Illinois Agricultural Experimental Station, the institution which is recognized as an authority on these structures in the United States, and ideas developed by the Sheeley brothers themselves enabled the architect, Morris Rhodes, of Chambersburg, to complete plans for this building which is considered a model.

More than two hundred and fifty barrels of cement were used in the construction of the foundation and the first floor. The building, with a diameter of 90 feet and a height of 102 feet will have room for 90 head of horses and cattle on the ground floor, although to be sure plenty of working space only 66 stalls are being built; 50 of these stalls will be equipped with steel stanchions for cattle and the other 16 arranged to accommodate horses. All the stalls are constructed in two large crescents with sufficient space for a manure team to pass back of them. Three large watering troughs on this floor will relieve the necessity of taking the stock out of the building for water on stormy winter days. To insure plenty of light and ventilation there are 31 glass windows in this section.

One of the amazing features of the building is the silo, 12 feet in diameter and rising to a height of 57½ feet in the exact center of the structure. It is constructed entirely of hollow tile and has a capacity of 145 tons. This enormous quantity of feed will be used for fattening cattle for the markets. In addition to its use for feed storage it supports the rafters and girders. For a distance of 54 feet these rafters have no support except this silo wall.

The second floor contains 12,000 feet of planks supported by 14 girders, each 30 feet 4 inches long. Timber of this sort is remarkable in itself and is seldom seen in this section of the country. These girders together with the balance of the 100,000 feet of lumber used were cut by the Sheeley Brothers from their own land. This floor is dust proof and will be used for storage of grains, hay and straw. Shutes will run from this part of the building to the cement managers of the animals on the floor below.

Asbestos shingles are used on the roof and it is built at such an angle that snow will slide off readily. Its construction with a cupola on the top relieves the building from a squat appearance that many circular structures have.

The details of the plan have been worked out with a view to the expeditious performance of labor and it has attracted the attention of progressive farmers from all sections of the country. It has been no uncommon thing for the Sheeleys to have visitors from the far western states come to examine their building during the past few months. Mr. Daniel Sheeley states that as many as 300 people have been there on one Sunday. The gathering of the apple crop has delayed the last few weeks work necessary to finish the interior but it will be completed in November.

Miniature Lake.

Another unusual sight for a country residence of this vicinity is a miniature lake on the front lawn at the Sheeley home. Its dimensions are 80 by 120 feet and the four walls to a depth of 6 feet are constructed of concrete; more than 300 barrels were required to finish the work. Water

MOUNTAIN FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Fire Near Mount Holly Burned Hundreds of Acres of Timber. Cause Believe to be Sparks from Passing Engine.

Igniting, it is believed, from sparks from a passing engine, fire Monday broke out in the mountains near Mount Holly and burned over some hundreds of acres of valuable timber before it finally subdued about nine o'clock Tuesday when the changing wind drove the blaze back on its previous path.

The timber land burned was on the mountain on the east side of the gap immediately opposite Mount Holly Park and has also been burned over on a number of previous occasions. The land is partly the property of W. S. Russell, of the Cumberland Clay Works, and partly of the Kitzmiller Brothers, of Shippensburg, who recently purchased the park and a considerable amount of adjoining property.

When the fire was first discovered a number of men were called out to fight it but the fire continued to spread until Tuesday evening when it finally died out. Much apprehension is felt among the residents of the mountain towns. This is the usual season of fires and the continued drought, which in some places is causing great inconvenience, has made the timber exceedingly dry so that a conflagration might easily get beyond bounds within a short time if started. Reports of other fires in the mountain were received but the location of none of these could be definitely secured.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Reformed Classis Accepts Resignation of Rev. Korn. Charges Changed.

New Oxford's charge of the Reformed church was divided at a meeting of the Gettysburg Classis held at that place Tuesday. The New Chester church which had formerly been supplied by the pastor residing at New Oxford was detached, and the New Oxford minister will hereafter fill only the Abbottstown pulpit in addition to his own.

Rev. W. A. Korn's resignation was accepted to take effect November first. A supply committee consisting of the following ministers from Hanover: S. P. Mauger, A. S. Dechant and M. J. Roth will supply the charge until a regular incumbent is elected.

The matter of reconstructing the charges within the jurisdiction of the classis will be considered by a committee consisting of Rev. T. C. Hesson, of Arendtsville, Rev. J. H. Hartman, of Hanover, and Rev. J. S. Hartman, of the Hoffman Orphanage. They will take up the feasibility of combining Hampton with New Chester.

LARGE CROWD COMING

Will Run Excursion Train to Foot Ball Game Saturday.

A committee, appointed by the Student Senate at Dickinson College is making arrangements and has secured a reduced excursion rate to Gettysburg for the foot ball game on Saturday, of $1 return, providing that 130 tickets are sold. A special train will leave Carlisle on the Reading at 8:15 a. m., and returning will leave Gettysburg at 6:00 p. m. A large crowd of Carlisle people is expected to accompany the students, as Carlisle always takes a keen interest in the Dickinson-Gettysburg game.

CHESTNUT CROP ABOVE NORMAL

Yield of Chestnuts in the Mountains and the Pigeon Hills is Good This Year. Few Grow Cultivated Nuts in County.

Adams county will have a crop of uncultivated chestnuts this year that will probably exceed the yields of most seasons. The wild chestnuts have been on sale at the several vendors for the past ten days and people from town have been making excursions to the mountains during the last week to gather the nuts.

Residents of the lower end of the county gather their supply from the Pigeon Hills. The trees in that section are said to be bearing more abundantly this year than those on the mountains. The worms have gotten into the nuts on the mountain to such an extent that in some places it has effected the harvest for commercial purposes.

There are but two growers who have endeavored to raise cultivated chestnuts to any extent in the county. John Garretson and Josiah Prickett each planted fifty trees some years ago. For a number of seasons they secured reasonably lucrative returns from them but in each case their other interests have required their time to such an extent that they were unable to give the chestnut trees the amount of attention necessary to produce the best results. The trees set out by these men were Paragon, Japan Giants and Munbo. Mr. Prickett states that of these three varieties he has been most successful with the Paragon strain. Cultivated chestnuts are much lower in price this year than they have been for some time. Dealers are only paying about $5.00 per bushel for them, when they have brought as much as $9.00 in a good year. Neither Mr. Prickett nor Mr. Garretson will have an extensive yield this season.

Most of the county people who reside in the mountains and in the Pigeon Hills who gather more chestnuts than are used in home consumption do not make any effort to dispose of them to the city dealers. They prefer to sell them to the small store keepers and the owners of peanut machines who add, roast chestnuts to their stock during the fall season.

EXCELLENT RECITAL

Prof. Benbow Entertained Large Audience in St. James Church.

An audience that occupied the gallery as well as the main floor of the church listened to Prof. Benbow give a recital on the organ at St. James, Tuesday evening. His selections were rendered with an ability that has been rarely shown before a Gettysburg audience. Prof. Benbow, who is a Fellow of the American Association of Organists, had been secured to give a recital on the new organ in St. Mark's Lutheran church of Hanover for the Lutheran Synod meeting there this week and was persuaded through the efforts of Rev. Baker to give his recital in Gettysburg. A collection taken to defray the expenses of the performance amounted to more than $30.

MEETING OF SYNOD

Members of Lutheran Church Transact Business at Hanover.

Practically all of the Lutheran clergymen at Gettysburg are attending the sessions of the West Pennsylvania Synod meeting being held in St. Mark's Lutheran church at Hanover. Dr. Granville delivered an address before the body describing the present condition of Gettysburg College, and Rev. J. B. Baker was on the program to speak Tuesday night although he was unable to be present. At the election of officers for the coming year Rev. J. J. Hill, of Littlestown was chosen president; Rev. George N. Lauffer, of Newville, secretary; Rev. Albert Bell, of York, treasurer. Rev. W. D. Nichol, of New Chester was the only Adams county resident among the fourteen new members elected. The sessions will continue until Thursday.

REPORT HEARD ON CIVIC NURSE

President Singmaster Delivered Report at Meeting Held in Court House. Officers Re-elected. Treasury Has Nice Balance.

All of last year's officers and board of directors were re-elected at a meeting of the District Nurse Association held in the court house, Tuesday evening. The main feature of the meeting was the president's report which included that of the treasurer.

In making the report, the president, Dr. J. A. Singmaster went into details of the work conducted by the association during the past year so as to give those present who are interested in the project but who have not taken an active part in its conduct a clear idea of the benefits the association has produced. The essential facts of the report are as follows: Meetings throughout the year were regularly held when the occasion demanded at the home of Miss Annie Horner. The paying membership now consists of 191, who pay from $1 to $5 annually. The treasurer's report contained the items below: Balance at last audit, $121.20; Dues and house to house canvass, $696.85; Fees from patients, $253.05; Proceeds of entertainments, $61.46; Collections in churches, $38.93; Donations from societies, $35.00; making a total of $1206.49 received during the year. The expenditures were: Nurses salary, $600; Room rent, $104; Sunday items, $33.59; bringing the total to $737.59. This leaves a balance on hand amounting to $468.90.

The statistics concerning Miss Kate Briel's activity are: 1359 visits made to 225 families during the year that closed September 30th. In this period she secured in fees $253.05. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company contributed $94 of this amount for visits to its policy holders. The report was unstinted in its praise of Miss Briel and mentioned that not a single complaint had been received concerning her work. Attention was then called to the fact that while Miss Briel's work is free to those who cannot afford to pay for it, the ones who are able are expected to pay from ten to fifty cents a visit.

After the report had been read Dr. L. A. Parsons spoke in commendation of the work being done. The meeting was concluded with remarks from Rev. F. E. Taylor and L. L. Taylor.

MC SHERRY BOYS GAIN MUCH FAME

C. W. McSherry Gains Envious Reputation as Counsel for Defense in Notable Murder Trial. Tom McSherry Court Stenographer.

C. W. McSherry, a former resident of Gettysburg and a brother of William McSherry, Esq., has attained unusual prominence in his profession at his adopted home, Silver City, New Mexico, by representing Mrs. George C. King, a defendant in a murder trial that is holding the interest of New Mexico much as did the Carman case occupy the attention of the North a few months ago. Thomas McSherry, another brother of Mr. William McSherry, is court stenographer of Grant county, of which Silver City is the county seat, and has been taking all the testimony in the case.

C. W. McSherry spent several years here reading law in his brother's office and left to practice his profession in New Mexico about two years ago. He made many friends while he lived here and apparently retained that quality upon taking up his new residence. He represented a number of important clients before he had been there any length of time and when Mrs. King was accused as an accomplice in the murder of her husband he was chosen to defend her along with other counsel for the defense spoken of by the Silver City Enterprise as "the most brilliant array of counsel ever gathered within the county."

According to the account given by the newspaper mentioned above, Augustus West, an alleged lover of Mrs. King's, is on trial for the murder of the woman's husband and Mrs. King was held as accomplice. On the night of July 27th West was a visitor at the King home and was sitting in a room with Mrs. King when her husband appeared upon the scene and accused them of planning to elope. At the same time he drew his revolver and approached West. West retreated to an adjoining room with King following and shortly thereafter a shot was heard and King staggered to the floor, dead.

In its account of the trial at which Mrs. King was acquitted after the able defense of Mr. McSherry, "The Enterprise" states:

"Upon motion of C. W. McSherry, attorney for Mrs. King, Judge Neblett at the conclusion of the taking of the testimony instructed the jury for acquittal on the grounds of insufficient evidence. Attorneys for West immediately asked for reopening the case to put Mrs. King on the stand in behalf of West. Motion granted. Mrs. King was too overwrought at first to go on the stand but fifteen minutes later ascended the witness chair and told the story of the killing. She was shaken with sobs and the testimony was frequently interrupted to allow her to compose herself. The defense confined their examination strictly to what happened on the night of the killing.

"She said King came into the room while she was talking to West and accused them of planning to go away. She told him they were not. He said he knew better and started to draw his gun. West, she said, fled from the room toward the hallway and a few moments later she heard a shot from the hall. Her husband turned toward her and she saw something was the matter with him, he staggered toward the door and she grabbed him and he fell just outside the door in her arms. "Cross examination by the prosecution failed to shake her testimony in any important particular.

"Mrs. King and her little boy left the court room immediately and a few minutes later left the jail in company with her brother and attorney. The inmates of the jail gathered at the windows and waved her farewell as she left."

In summing up the trial the same paper gives an account of the expert work done by Thomas McSherry by going on to say:

"The case has been one of the hardest fought battles in the history of this judicial district and has brought out the best talent of the counsel on both sides.

"The records in the case are quite voluminous taking over 700 typewritten pages. Court stenographer, Tom McSherry who took down the entire case from beginning to end and who officiated in a most efficient manner, is taking a much needed rest from the strenuous activity of the past week."

GERMANS MOVE NEARER SEA

Take the City of Lille and Bombard Bruges.

SUFFER LOSS IN CENTER

Heavy Fighting in Northwestern France--French Score Noteworthy Advance.

London, Oct. 14.--In northwestern France and southwestern Belgium the Germans continue their advancement in force toward the seacoast. The Germans have occupied the important French city of Lille, in the vicinity of which fighting has been going on for many days.

According to the French official account, the city was held only by a territorial detachment, which gave way before the German army corps sent to take it. This indicates that the position was not considered to be of great strategic importance.

As an offset, the French announce "a somewhat noteworthy advance" in the region of Berry-Au-Bac, northeast of Soissons, and east of the plateau of Craonne, which has been the pivot of General Von Kluck's advanced position. They also claim gains between Arras and Albert, south of Lille. On the right bank of the Meuse, east of Verdun, the French have advanced.

In southwestern Belgium the Germans have reached a point near Bruges, which city is reported to be under bombardment. Bruges is fourteen miles east of Ostend. A German aviator has pushed on to Ostend and dropped two bombs there, neither of which exploded.

The official bulletin issued in Berlin says:

"German cavalry and light artillery occupy the territory of Hazebrouck and Ypres."

The official bulletin issued in Paris says:

"There is nothing to announce except a somewhat noteworthy advance in the region of Berry-Au-Bac. On our left wing our forces have resumed the offensive in the regions of Hazebrouck and Bethune against detachments of the enemy composed in large part of cavalry coming from the front along Bailleul, Estaires and La Bassée."

"The town of Lille, held by a territorial detachment, has been attacked and occupied by a German army corps."

"Between Arras and Albert we have made notable progress."

"On the center also we have made progress in the region of Berry-Au-Bac, and we have advanced toward Soudan, in the west of the Argonne and north of Malancourt."

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse, on the right bank of the Meuse, our troops who hold the heights of the Meuse to the east of Verdun, have advanced."

"To the south of the road from Verdun to Metz, in the region of Apremont, we have gained a little territory on our right and repulsed a German attack on our left."

"On our right wing, the Vosges and Alsace, there has been no change."

"To sum up, the day was marked by perceptible progress on the part of our forces at various points on the field of battle."

That dispositions are being made by both the Germans and the allies for a big battle between Lens and Sassel is deduced from the fragmentary information given out by the intelligence departments of the belligerent powers. Cassel is eighteen miles inland from the fortified seaport of Dunkirk, on the Straits of Dover.

A Times correspondent in the north of France reports strong German columns of all arms passing through Bailleul, department of the Nord, near the Belgian frontier, in the direction of Ypres, in West Flanders, Belgium, thirty miles southwest of Bruges. Around Ypres the Germans have concentrated in large numbers. German cavalry patrols have been seen in many places within twenty miles of Dunkirk. These detachments doubtless are part of a screen thrown out to test the strength of the allies and to mask the movements of the German main body.

A Daily Mail correspondent telegraphs: "The fighting around Arras has been exceedingly severe and Lens has changed hands at least three times in as many weeks. If the Germans could succeed in bursting the ring at some part their desperate program might prevail, but so far they have failed, and their forces are hopelessly scattered."

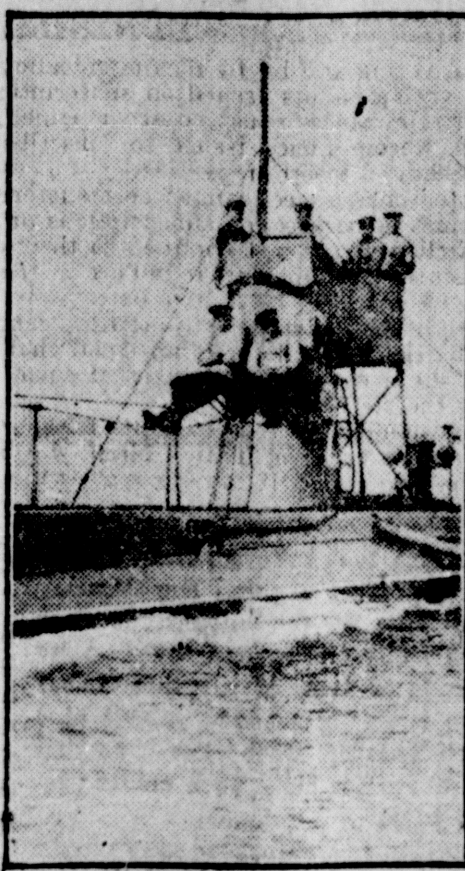

"It would be absurd, however, for that reason to say they are negligible. On the contrary, they are still capable of giving great trouble. Their cavalry lies in considerable numbers on the east of Hazebrouck (thirty-two miles northwest of Lille) and in the country surrounding Orchies (sixteen miles southeast of Lille). All their scattered forces in this region are being slowly but surely shepherded in the right direction northeast, while the forces threatening Hazebrouck are being driven onward. In short, after weeks of furious fighting they have accomplished nothing worth recording."

GERMAN SEA FIGHTER.

Type of Submarine That Sank Russian Cruiser.

Information gleaned from the Dutch press, from travellers and from other sources points to the conclusion that during the last ten days the German armies in France have been heavily reinforced. There has been a steady flow of trains to western France through Aix-la-Chapelle, and some ten or more Landsturm divisions must now be added to the German troops.

CAPITAL OF BELGIUM REMOVED TO FRANCE

Transferred to Havre, But King and Cabinet Stay in Ostend.

Bordeaux, Oct. 14.--A portion of the Belgian government and members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Belgian court left Ostend for Havre, France.

The French government has taken all necessary measures for the installation of the Belgian government in French territory, which was decided upon that the Belgians may have full liberty of action.

King Albert remains in Belgium at the head of his army. The minister of war and other members of the Belgian cabinet also continue to transact their business in Belgium.

At the beginning of the war the Belgian capital was in Brussels. When the German march through Belgium began it was removed to Antwerp. The removal to Ostend took place last week, when the fall of Antwerp became imminent. The latest move would indicate that the Belgians fear Ostend may not long resist the Germans. In such an event, King Albert's remnant of an army is in danger of complete capture.

British Consul to Leave Ostend.

Washington, Oct. 14.--The British consul at Ostend has placed his interests in the hands of the American consulate, and will leave, the occupation of the city by the Germans being expected.

SERVIAN PRINCES WOUNDED

George, King Peter's Eldest Son, Reported Mortally Hurt.

London, Oct. 14.--Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia and his brother, Prince George, are reported wounded in the fighting against the Austrians, according to a Berlin dispatch via Copenhagen.

Prince George is reported mortally hurt. The crown prince is twenty-six years old, and has acted as regent during the illness of King Peter. Prince George is his elder brother, but was forced to renounce his rights of succession in 1909 in favor of his brother.

Say Argentine Consul Is Slain.

London, Oct. 14.--The correspondent at Amsterdam of the Central News quotes the newspaper Het Volk to the effect that the Argentine consul at Antwerp, M. ## BRITISH BOER TROOPS MUTINY

Command Joins Forces With Invading Germans.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

Colonel Maritz, Head of the Mutiny, Threatens Invasion From Northwest--Disaffection Said to Be Widespread.

Cape Town, South Africa, Oct. 14.--It has been definitely announced here that a command under Colonel Maritz has rebelled in the northwest of the Cape provinces.

Martial law has been proclaimed throughout the Union of South Africa. It is understood that the mutinous troops are largely Boers, supposedly serving near the border of German Southwest Africa.

The rebellion among the forces of the Northwest Cape province has been brewing since the resignation of General Beyers as commander-in-chief of the Union forces.

As soon as the government realized this situation it sent Colonel Britz to relieve Maritz of his command. Colonel Britz then discovered that Maritz was commanding German troops as well as his own and that he had German guns in his possession.

Maritz, who has been given the German rank of general, had arrested those of his officers and men who were unwilling to join the Germans and had sent them as prisoners of war to German Southwest Africa.

According to an official statement an agreement was drawn up between Maritz and the governor of German Southwest Africa guaranteeing the independence of the Union as a republic, ceding Walvis bay and other parts of the Union to the Germans, and undertaking that the Germans should invade the Union only if Maritz asked them to do so.

Maritz boasted that he possessed large supplies of guns, rifles, ammunition and money, obtained from the Germans, and that he would overrun the whole of South Africa.

"In view of this state of affairs," concludes the official statement, "the government is taking most drastic steps to quell this rebellion and punish all rebels and traitors according to their deserts."

Rebellion Real Danger to England.

London, Oct. 14.--The rebellion of a section of the Dutch element in South Africa, which broke out with a suddenness of a bolt from the blue, is the first warning note that has marred the harmony in the British empire since the outbreak of the European war.

That this rising was real and dangerous was sufficiently proved by official dispatches from Governor General Buxton to the imperial government and by the drastic step General Louis Botha and his colleagues have taken to stamp it out by declaring martial law in the whole Union of South Africa.

It apparently is the belief of General Botha's government that others besides those under the immediate command of Colonel Maritz may have been affected, hence the inclusion of the whole dominion in the order establishing martial law.

Germanizing factors are said by the British authorities to have been at work for years in the frontier districts and to have even percolated in southwestern Transvaal and other Dutch districts.

Telegrams from Cape Town say that a majority of the Dutch remain absolutely loyal, and this seems to be shown by resolutions drawn up at an emergency meeting of the South African party, which condemned the conduct of Colonel Maritz in the strongest terms. A telegram was dispatched to Premier Botha unreservedly offering the services of the Cape Dutch in any capacity desired.

ATTACKED BY BEES

Boy and Woman Make Their Escape by Plunge Into Pond.

Pleasantdale, N. J., Oct. 14.--While picking apples from a tree on the farm of Harry Vincent, Edwin Muller, of Orange, lost his balance and fell from a high branch.

He struck a beehive and lay stunned for several minutes. By the time he got to his feet he was covered with bees, and his screams attracted Mrs. Vincent.

She took the youth and threw him bodily into a pond. Himself attacked by the bees, she, too, had to take refuge in the water. They had to swim across the pond to get rid of the bees.

Bomb Scare in New York.

New York, Oct. 14.--Police reserves from the Fifty-first street station were rushed to St. Patrick's cathedral, following a report that two bombs had been thrown into the edifice. Later the police said that the explosion was caused by a hot-air box used for heating purposes. It was near the altar and when it exploded it shattered several windows and injured one man.

Clazza was an Italian miner, one of two brothers, who engaged in a revolver fight with two American miners, Willis Adams and Ben Cooper. The fight occurred Sunday night, and began over a request for a cigarette. When it ended Sam Clazza was dead and both American miners were badly wounded.

MEMORIAL TO MRS. WILSON

Mrs. Wilson's dying wish was that a bill for the elimination of the unsanitary alleys of Washington be passed, and since her death this has been done.

$60,000 VERDICT FOR U. S. IN CANAL SUIT

Judge Instruct Jury to Make Award.

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 14.--In the United States district court the suit of the government to recover $154,000 in old dividends alleged to be due to the federal government from the Chesapeake & Delaware Canal company, terminated suddenly when the jury, under instructions from Judge Bradford, who held that the statute of limitations did not apply, found a verdict for the government for dividends and interest amounting to $60,111.19.

The defense was given time in which to take an appeal. The sudden termination was a great surprise to many, who had expected the case to last for more than a month, depending upon the statute of limitations knocking out the government side of the case.

The suit recalls the near-wrecking of the company many years ago by Henry R. Lesley and his cousin, James A. L. Wilson.

Lesley and Wilson alternated as secretary and treasurer of the company and confessed to appropriating nearly $700,000 of its assets. They pleaded guilty in the Philadelphia courts and served eight years and six years respectively in the eastern penitentiary.

In addition to stealing from the company, Lesley and Wilson issued fraudulent bonds. The government bought 14,000 shares of stock for $450,000 to help build the canal, and says no dividends were ever paid.

Movie Play Too Real.

In the engagement he was struck in the back by a wedge from a gun in which a blank cartridge had been discharged to make smoke for the action.

ANTWERP GAY DURING SIEGE

People Become Used to the Sound of Cannon.

DIARY TELLS VIVID STORY.

Woman's Account of a Week's Experiences and Observations While Belgian City Was Under Bombardment—"War," She Says, "Is Not So Alarming as Intensely Depressing."

WHAT A SIEGE MEANS.

Siege.—The sitting of an army around or before a fortified place for the purpose of compelling the garrison to surrender; the surrounding or investing of a place by an army and approaching it by passages and advanced works which cover the besiegers from the enemy's fire.—Webster's Dictionary.

Miss Tennyson Jesse, who arrived in London by the last boat from Antwerp, kept a diary of a week spent there during the siege, from which the following extracts are taken:

"Sept. 29.—Antwerp looks like a medieval city at the time of a tournament. All the houses have huge flags draped arisewise from windows. The festive air seems all the more incongruous, now that we have heard that the bombardment has begun.

"6.30.—I just met Mr. — and Mr. — on the way back from an expedition to the forts. They left Mr. — a photographer, to spend the night there. They themselves saw a shell explode over a cluster of houses from which a procession of peasants presently came forth. One man was wheeling a barrow in which was his small stock of worldly goods. The dead body of his little son lay sprawled over the top. Sitting beside it was a girl of three with her face covered with blood. They say the sights are ghastly.

Ghastly Horrors of War.

"Sept. 30.—The photographer came back today. A shell burst in a fort at night and killed nine men in the room where he was, including a waiter from the 'St. Regis,' standing at the side, whose head was blown off. The photographer tore down the road screaming, but he is going back tonight.

"Many wounded women are brought along on stretchers with their poor, mutilated faces, torn by pieces of shell covered up. I am writing this in my room at night, with the boom of heavy guns sounding all the time.

"Oct. 2.—This afternoon I was lying down in my room when I heard a terrific bang.—Looking out, I saw shrapnel bursting through the air. On running into the street I was hustled under cover by gendarmes. I found that the firing was at a Tanbe, which was flying just overhead. It got away.

"I went crawling along the house fronts at dark this evening to buy cakes for supper. I saw infantry and artillery going through. Five thousand refugees are clamoring at the city gates, but no more are allowed in. They are being diverted by way of Ghent because of the shortage of provisions.

"Oct. 3.—It appears that the Ostend route is closed to civilians. They have taken all the wounded out of the hospitals. The streets are full of them and they are being carried along.

Gay Through It All.

"Oct. 4.—Thousands may have left but Antwerp never looked so gay or so crowded, with the people all in the streets and flags and cars everywhere.

"Oct. 6.—The news today is bad. The Germans have crossed the Nethe. Antwerp, like all Belgian towns, is alternately scared and apathetic. This evening the firing is distinctly nearer. War is not so alarming as intensely depressing. At first the ghastly sights are shocking, almost to the point of being stimulating, but after weeks the deadly depression eats into one.

"Oct. 7.—The bombardment is very heavy now. It is impossible to get out via Ghent, as the road and the railway are blocked. Most of the people in Antwerp are still as gay as though nothing was happening, probably because they are all so used to the sound of cannon."

POTATO A WIRELESS STATION

By Sticking Two Needles in Spud Intercepts Message Without Apparatus. Father Alfani, director of the Florence observatory at Florence, Italy, believes that the invention of the priest, Domenico Argentieri, of a system to receive wireless messages with out the use of poles or batteries is scientifically sound.

He related that after the declaration of war the Italian government forced all private wireless stations, including that of the Florence observatory, to discontinue. The next day Father Alfani obtained from Argentieri copies of official wireless messages which the priest had been able to intercept without a wireless installation.

There were many ways to do this, Father Alfani explained. One of the most simple was the very elementary expedient of sticking two steel needles into a potato.

Lion Can Be Heard Farthest.

The roar of a lion can be heard farther than the sound of any living creature. Next come the cries of the hyena, the screech owl, the panther and the jackal in succession.

AN OLD RECIPE

TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, bring back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyleth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautiful dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Notice
Letters of Administration on the Estate of Emanuel G. Trostle, late of Cashtown, Franklin Township, Adams county, Pa., deceased, having been granted to the undersigned residing in Highland Township all persons indebted to said Estate are requested to make immediate payment, and those having claims will present them for settlement to HARRY M. TROSTLE, Administrator.

Simply Breathe It

That's the Way You Use Hyomei, the Safe Catarrh Remedy.

The most pleasant, easiest, harmless, and the really sensible method for the cure of catarrh is Hyomei which can be had from any drug store. Just put twenty drops of the liquid in the small inhaler that comes with every complete outfit—then breathe it. A few minutes' use almost instantly clears the head and stops that annoying sniffing.

When using Hyomei every particle of air that enters the breathing organs is charged with an antiseptic, healing balsam that destroys the catarrh germs stops the unclean discharges from the nose, relieves the irritation and quickly heals the sore and inflamed tissues. The first day's use of Hyomei will show a decided improvement no matter how distressing the trouble.

Catarrh, which usually begins with a neglected cold, often becomes a very serious ailment, so don't wait but start using Hyomei to-day—it is inexpensive and The People's Drug Store always sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan.

CHAPTER XIII.

Courtlandt Tells a Story.

The colonel and his guests at luncheon had listened to Courtlandt without sound or movement beyond the occasional rasp of feet shifting under the table. He had begun with the old familiar phrase—"I've got a story."

"Tell it," had been the instant request.

At the beginning the men had been leaning at various negligent angles—some with their elbows upon the table, some with their arms thrown across the backs of their chairs. The partridge had been excellent, the wine delicious, the tobacco irreproachable. Burma, the tinkle of bells in the temples, the strange pictures in the bazaars, long journeys over smooth and stormy seas; romance, moving and colorful, which began at Rangoon, had zig-zagged around the world, and ended in Berlin.

"And so," concluded the teller of the tale, "that is the story. This man was perfectly innocent of any wrong, a victim of malice on the one hand and of injustice on the other."

"Is that the end of the yarn?" asked the colonel.

"Who in life knows what the end of anything is? This is not a story out of a book." Courtlandt accepted a fresh cigar from the box which Rangoon passed to him, and dropped his dead weight into the ash-bowl.

"Has he given up?" asked Abbott, his voice strangely unfamiliar in his own ears.

"A man can struggle just so long against odds, then he wins or becomes broken. Women are not logical; generally they permit themselves to be guided by impulse rather than by reason. This man I am telling you about was proud; perhaps too proud. It is a shameful fact, but he ran away. True, he wrote letter after letter, but all these were returned unopened. Then he stopped."

"A woman would be a good deal rather believe circumstantial evidence than not. Humph!" The colonel primed his pipe and relighted it. "She couldn't have been worth much."

"Worth much?" cried Abbott. "What do you imply by that?"

"No man will really give up a woman who is really worth while, that is, of course, admitting that your man, Courtlandt, is a man. Perhaps, though, it was his fault. He was not persistent enough, maybe a bit spineless. The fact that he gave up so quickly possibly convinced her that her impressions were correct. Why, I'd have followed her day in and day out, year after year, never would I have let up until I had proved to her that she had been wrong."

"The colonel is right," Abbott approved, never taking his eyes off Courtlandt, who was apparently absorbed in the contemplation of the bread crumbs under his fingers.

"And more, by hook or crook, I'd have dragged in the other woman by the hair and made her confess."

"I do not doubt it, colonel," responded Courtlandt, with a dry laugh. "And that would really have been the end of the story. The heroine of this rambling tale would then have been absolutely certain of collusion between the two."

"Now, then, Mr. Courtlandt," said Harrigan, his eyes blue and cold as ice, "perhaps you will explain?"

With rage and despair in his heart, Courtlandt flung off the hand and answered: "I refuse!"

"Ah! Harrigan stood off a few steps and ran his glance critically up and down the man of whom he had thought to make a friend. "You're a husky lad. There's one way out of this for you."

"So long as it does not necessitate any explanations," indifferently.

"In the bottom of one of Nora's trunks is a set of my old gloves. There will not be anyone up at the tennis court this time of day. If you are not a mean cuss, if you are not an ordinary low-down imitation of a man, you'll meet me up there inside of five minutes. If you can stand up in front of me for ten minutes, you need not make any explanations. On the other hand, you'll hike out of here as fast as boats and trains can take you. And never come back."

"I am nearly twenty years younger than you, Mr. Harrigan."

"Oh, don't let that worry you any," with a tranquil laugh.

"Very well. You will find me there. After all, you are her father."

"You bet I am!"

Harrigan stole into his daughter's room and soundlessly bored into the bottom of the trunk that contained the relics of past glory. As he pulled them forth, a folded oblong strip of parchment came out with them and fluttered to the floor; but he was too busily engaged to notice it, nor would he have bothered if he had. The bottom of the trunk was littered with old letters and programs and operatic scores. He wrapped the gloves in a newspaper and got away without being seen. He was as happy as a boy who had discovered an opening in the fence between him and the apple orchard. He was rather astonished to see Courtlandt kneeling in the clover patch, hunting for a four-leaf clover. It was patent that the young man was not troubled with nerves.

"Here!" he cried, nervously, tossing

"If You Can Stand Up in Front of Me for Ten Minutes You Need Make No Explanations."

over a pair of gloves. "It is this method of settling the dispute isn't satisfactory, I'll accept your explanations."

For reply Courtlandt stood up and stripped to his undershirt. He drew on the gloves and laced them with the aid of his teeth. Then he knelt down carefully. The two men eyed each other a little more respectfully than they had ever done before.

"This single court is about as near as we can make it. The man who steps outside is whipped."

"I agree," said Courtlandt.

"No rounds with rests; until one or the other is outside. Clean breaks. That's about all. Now, put up your dukes and take a man's licking. I thought you were your father's son, but I guess you are like the rest of 'em, hunters of women."

Courtlandt laughed and stepped to the middle of the court. Harrigan did not waste any time. He sent in a straight jab to the jaw, but Courtlandt blocked it neatly and countered with a hard one on Harrigan's ear, which began to swell.

"Fine!" growled Harrigan. "You know something about the game. It won't be as if I was whipping a baby." He sent a left to the body, but the right failed to reach his man.

For some time Harrigan jabbed and swung and uppercut; often he reached his opponent's body, but never his face. It worried him a little to find that he could not stir Courtlandt more than two or three feet. Courtlandt never followed up any advantage, thus making Harrigan force the fighting, which was rather to his liking. But presently it began to enter his mind convincingly that apart from the initial blow, the younger man was working wholly on the defensive. As if he were afraid he might hurt him! This served to make the old fellow furious. He bored in right and left, left and right, and Courtlandt gave way, step by step until he was so close to the line that he could see it from the corner of his eye. This glance, swift as it was, came near to being his undoing. Harrigan caught him with a terrible right on the jaw. It was a glancing blow, otherwise the fight would have ended then and there. Instantly he lurched forward and clinched before the other could add the finishing touch.

The two pushed about, Harrigan fiercely striving to break the younger man's hold. He was beginning to breathe hard besides. A little longer, and his blows would lack the proper steam. Finally Courtlandt broke away of his own accord. His head buzzed a little, but aside from that he had recovered. Harrigan pursued his tactics and rushed. But this time there was an offensive return. Courtlandt became the aggressor. There was no withstanding him. And Harrigan fairly saw the end; but with that indomitable pluck which had made him famous in the annals of the ring, he kept banging away. The swift, cruel jabs here and there upon his body began to tell. Oh, for a minute's rest and a piece of lemon on his parched tongue! Suddenly Courtlandt rushed him tigerishly, landing a jab which closed Harrigan's right eye. Courtlandt dropped his hands, and stepped back. His glance traveled suggestively to Harrigan's feet. He was outside the "ropes."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Harrigan, for losing my temper."

"What's the odds? I lost mine. You win," Harrigan was a true sportsman. He had no excuses to offer. He had dug the pit of humiliation with his own hands. He recognized this as one of two facts. The other was, that had Courtlandt extended himself, the battle would have lasted about one minute. It was gall and wormwood, but there you were.

"And now, you ask for explanations. Ask your daughter to make them." Courtlandt pulled off the gloves and got into his clothes. "You may add, sir, that I shall never trouble her again with my unwelcome attentions."

I leave for Milan in the morning. Courtlandt left the field of victory without further comment.

"Well, what do you think of that?" mused Harrigan, as he stooped over to gather up the gloves. "Any one would say that he was the injured party. I'm in wrong on this deal somewhere. I'll ask Miss Nora a question or two."

It was not so easy returning. He ran into his wife. He tried to dodge her, but without success.

"James, where did you get that black eye?" tragically.

"It's a daisy, ain't it, Molly?" pushing past her into Nora's room and closing the door after him.

"Father!"

"That you, Nora?" blinking.

"Father, if you have been fighting with him, I'll never forgive you."

"Forget it, Nora. I wasn't fighting. I only thought I was."

He raised the lid of the trunk and cast in the gloves haphazard. And then he saw the paper which had fallen out. He picked up and squinted at it, for he could not see very well. Nora was leaving the room in a temper.

"Going, Nora?"

"I am. And I advise you to have your dinner in your room."

Alone, he turned on the light. It never occurred to him that he might be prying into some of Nora's private correspondence. He unfolded the parchment and held it under the light. For a long time he stared at the writing, which was in English, at the date, at the names. Then he quietly refolded it and put it away for future use, immediate future use.

"This is a great world," he murmured, rubbing his ear tenderly.

CHAPTER XIV.

Journey's End.

Harrigan dined alone. He was in disgrace; he was sore, mentally as well as physically; and he ate his dinner without relish, in simple obedience to those well-regulated periods of hunger that assailed him three times a day, in spring, summer, autumn and winter. By the time the waiter had cleared away the dishes, Harrigan had a perfect between his teeth (along with a certain matrimonial bit), and smoked as if he had wagered to finish the cigar in half the usual stretch. He then began to walk the floor, much after the fashion of a man who has the toothache, or the earache, which would be more to the point. To his direct mind no diplomacy was needed; all that was necessary was a few blunt questions. Nora could answer them as she chose. Nora, his baby, his little girl that used to run around barefooted and laugh when he applied the needed birch! How children grew up! And they never grew too old for the birch; they certainly never did.

They heard him from the drawing-room; tramp, tramp, tramp.

"Let him be, Nora," said Mrs. Harrigan, wisely. "He is in a rage about something. And your father is not the easiest man to approach when he's mad. If he fought Mr. Courtlandt, he believed he had some good reason for doing so."

"Mother, there are times when I believe you are afraid of father."

"I am always afraid of him. It is only because I make believe I'm not that I can get him to do anything. It was dreadful. And Mr. Courtlandt was such a gentleman. I could cry. But let your father be until tomorrow."

"And have him wandering about with that black eye? Something must be done for it. I'm not afraid of him."

"Sometimes I wish you were."

So Nora entered the lion's den fearlessly. "Is there anything I can do for you, dad?"

"You can get the witch hazel and bathe this lamp of mine," grimly.

She ran into her own room and returned with the simpler devices for reducing a swollen eye. She did not notice, or pretended that she didn't, that he locked the door and put the key in his pocket. He sat down in a chair, under the light; and she went to work deftly.

"I've got some make-up, and tomorrow morning I'll paint it for you."

"You don't ask any questions," he said, with grimness.

"Would it relieve your eye any?" lightly.

He laughed. "No; but it might relieve my mind."

"Well, then, why did you do so foolish a thing? At your age! Don't you know that you can't go on whipping every man you take a dislike to?"

"I haven't taken any dislike to Courtlandt. But I saw him kiss you."

"I can take care of myself."

"Perhaps. I asked him to explain. He refused. One thing puzzled me, though I didn't know what it was at the time. Now, when a fellow steals a kiss from a beautiful woman like you, Nora, I don't see why he should feel mad about it. When he had all but knocked your daddy to by-by, he said that you could explain."

"Don't press so hard," warningly.

"Well, can you?"

"Since you saw what he did, I do not see where explanations on my part are necessary."

"Nora, I've never caught you in a lie. I never want to. When you were little you were the truthfulest thing

I ever saw. No matter what kind of a licking was in store for you, you weren't afraid; you told the truth.

There, that'll do. Put some cotton over it and bind it with a handkerchief. It'll be black all right, but the swelling will go down. I can tell 'em a tennis ball hit me. It was more like a cannon ball, though. Say, Nora, you know I've always pooh-poohed these amateurs. People used to say that there were dozens of men in New York in my prime who could have laid me cold. I used to laugh. Well, I guess they were right. Courtlandt's got the stiffest kick I ever ran into. A pile driver, and if he had landed on my jaw, it would have been dormant as you say when you bid me good night in dago. That's all right now until tomorrow. I want to talk to you. Draw up a chair! There! As I said, I've never caught you in a lie, but I find that you've been living a lie for two years. You haven't been square to me, nor to your mother, nor to the chaps that came around and made love to you. You probably didn't look at it that way, but there's the fact. I'm not Paul Pry; but accidentally I came across this," taking the document from his pocket and handing it to her. "Read it. What's the answer?"

Nora's hands trembled.

"Take you a long time to read it. Is it true?"

"Yes."

"And I went up to the tennis court with the intention of knocking his head off; and now I'm wondering why he didn't knock off mine. Nora, he's a man; and when you get through with this, I'm going down to the hotel and apologize."

"You will do nothing of the sort; not with that eye."

"All right. I was always worried for fear you'd hook up with some dake you'd have to support. Now, I want to know how this chap happens to be my son-in-law. Make it brief, for I don't want to get tangled up more than is necessary."

Nora cracked the certificate in her fingers and stared uneasily at it for some time. "I met him first in Rangoon," she began slowly, without raising her eyes.

"When you went around the world on your own?"

"Yes. Oh, don't worry. I was always able to take care of myself."

"An Irish idea," answered Harrigan complacently.

"I loved him, father, with all my heart and soul. He was not only big and strong and handsome, but he was kindly and tender and thoughtful. Why, I never knew that he was rich until after I had promised to be his wife. When I learned that he was the Edward Courtlandt who was always getting into the newspapers, I laughed. There were stories about his escapades. There were innuendoes regarding certain women, but I put them out of my mind as twaddle. Ah, never had I been so happy! In Berlin we went about like two children. It was play. He brought me to the Opera and took me away; and we had the most charming little suppers. I never wrote you or mother because I wished to surprise you."

"I Beg Your Pardon, Mr. Harrigan, for Losing My Temper."

"You have. Go on."

"I had never paid much attention to Flora Desmond, though I knew that she was jealous of my success. Several times I caught her looking at Edward in a way I did not like."

"She looked at him, huh?"

"It was the last performance of the season. We were married that afternoon. We did not want anyone to know about it. I was not to leave the stage until the end of the following season. We were staying at the same hotel with rooms across the corridor. This was much against his wishes, but I prevailed."

"I see."

"Our rooms were opposite, as I said. After the performance that night I went to mine to complete the final packing. We were to leave at one for the Tyrol. Father, I saw Flora Desmond come out of his room."

Harrigan shut and opened his hands. "Do you understand? I saw her. She was laughing. I did not see him. My wedding night! She came from his room. My heart stopped, the world stopped, everything went black. All the stories that I had read and heard came back. When he knocked at my door I refused to see him. I never saw him again until that night in Paris when he forced his way into my apartment."

"Hang it, Nora, this doesn't sound like him!"

"I saw her."

Boston, Oct. 14.—Boston Braves—
Champions of the World!

The National league pennant winners defeated the Athletics, leaders of the American league, in the fourth successive game of the world's series at Fenway Park and took away from the Mackmen their three-won title of world's champions.

Final score—Boston, 3; Athletics, 1.
Only a wonder worker could have accomplished the downfall of Connie Mack and his great team in four straight games, establishing a new brief record for a world's series, but such a base ball necromancer exists here in Boston.

His name is George Stallings, and the man who pulled the Braves from the bottom to the top of the National league in two months has re-established his right to the title, "Miracle Man."

When Melnes grounded to Deal in the ninth inning for the final out of the series, victory crazed Boston fans swarmed over the field and stampeded toward their team.

The Braves saw the avalanche of men sweeping toward them, and, without halting to give vent to their joy at winning the series, they outspurred their pursuers to the dugout.

Mann, who had taken Connolly's place in left field in the sixth inning, was caught in a human maelstrom and raised high upon eager shoulders.

He was the immediate center of the great crush of thousands, and was in such danger of being injured that a squad of policemen were obliged to fight their way through the crowd, making a flying wedge, they carried Mann to safety.

It was little Dick Rudolph who beat the Athletics in the opening game at Shike Park who went back against them and turned the trick once more. The clever spit ball artist was not so good as in the first game, yielding seven hits, two of them doubles, but he was supreme in the pinches and was aided by phenomenal fielding.

Bob Shawkey, Mack's young twirler, was sent to the mound against the Braves. It was Shawkey's first battlem in a world's series, and he pitched highly creditable ball. Not a hit was made until the fourth inning, but that resulted in a run being scored, largely as a result of some indifferent
fielding by Eddie Collins.

Although the second baseman is not credited with an error, on one occasion he slipped up on a double play which would have prevented a run, and two of the Braves' six hits might have been turned into outs had Collins been fielding in his usual form.
But no errors were credited to anyone. This was the third errorless game ever played in a world's series.

"Herbie" Pennock was given a taste of experience in the big inter-league series, when Manager Mack sent him
in to pitch in the sixth inning.

The Braves failed to score during the three innings the young left-hander worked. The score:

LEMBERG RETAKEN;
WARSAW MAY FALL

Russians Drive Back From All Points.

London, Oct. 14.—Evading in some mystical way the watchfulness of the Russian censorship, a report has reached here which shows that for weeks past, apparently, the Russian government has concealed the successful advance of the Germans into Russia. Poland and has converted Russian defeats into magnificent victories.

The effect of this report is the more crushing in that it shows that all of Russian Poland has been overrun by the Kaiser's forces and that Warsaw alone is still in the hands of the czar, though its fall seems imminent.

The denouncement came in the form of a message from the American consul in Warsaw. This message told of the impending occupation of the capital of Russian Poland by the Germans and asked for instructions as to the care of foreign interests during the expected period of occupancy.

Another report which has served to discount the early advices concerning the successes of the Russian armies in Galicia reached London from Berlin to the effect that Lemberg has been retaken by the Austrians.

This, coming on the heels of the reported raising of the siege of Przemysl by the combined Austro-German forces, seems to indicate that the Russians have suffered serious reverses in the last few days of fighting, which they have concealed with the utmost care.

It is officially announced at Petrograd that the siege of Przemysl is progressing, according to a dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company from the Russian capital. The Russian artillery is rapidly destroying the forts, which, however, continue an energetic resistance.

The Przemysl garrison, it is further announced, does not exceed thirty thousand men.

The Armies

of England, France, Germany and Russia are not permitted to use a pound of alum baking powder. The efficiency of the soldiers depends too much upon their health and endurance to risk the use of food which the authorities believe would be detrimental.
Therefore the manufacture and sale of the alum powder is prohibited.

Royal Baking Powder is extensively used privately and by the military forces throughout the world. Its absolute wholesomeness, imparting as it does, healthful as well as appetizing qualities to the food, and its perfect keeping qualities in every climate and under different conditions, make it particularly desirable for all conditions of use.

TWO VIEWS OF A FACE

A Story For Halloween

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

It is singular how certain callings will be considered criminal in one age and respectable in another. There was a period--the early part of the nineteenth century--when the professional gambler in what is now the middle west was quite a prominent personage in the community. So in England there was a period when the highwayman, especially he who robbed the rich and gave to the poor, was regarded a very good medium for the equalizing of funds. Some of England's best blood has been represented on the highway.

One evening a couple of hundred years ago a gentleman and his daughter were bumping along in a chaise on an unpaved road that led from London to their home near Clough when they were stopped by a masked horseman who appeared at the window and demanded their valuables. Sir Evan Brierly, the father, produced his money and his watch without resistance, but Evelyn, his daughter, demurred.

"I will give you, sir," she said, "the only valuable article I have, which you cannot take from me by force, provided you will give me a glimpse of your features."

"Pray what may that be?"

"I shall not tell you."

The robber hesitated, then lifted his mask, and by the side light on the chaise Evelyn saw the face of a young man, singularly handsome and refined. She remained silent for a time, and the highwayman said:

"I have kept my part of the contract. It only remains for you to keep yours. What is this article that I may not take by force?"

"My heart."

At that moment there was a sound of horses' hoofs coming, and the highwayman rode away with the words: "So be it. I shall some day call for it."

Evelyn Brierly was but seventeen when she made this bargain. When questioned as to her intent when she made it she replied that she could not explain what induced her to say that in exchange for a view of the man's features she would give the only valuable article she had, nor had she framed a reply as to what the article was. She only knew that when she saw the strikingly handsome features of a gentleman the answer came to her from she knew not where and her reply was involuntary.

That was a period when Cromwell's ironides had defeated the forces of King Charles I. and Cromwell had made himself lord protector of England. The king's adherents were deprived of their fortunes and scattered. Some of them sought service in the armies of foreign sovereigns, and some, in order to make a living, took to the road. Among these was Lord Walter Wheatleigh, whose father, the Earl of Portland, had been killed at Naseby fighting for the king. Walter, the last of his race, had served under Prince Rupert, and after the beheading of the king his estates had been confiscated, leaving him penniless. He was one of those who took to the road for a living, and it was he who had stopped the chaise of Sir Evan Brierly and made the singular bargain with Evelyn. He afterward joined the young king (Charles II.) on the continent and at the restoration returned with the king, who restored to him his ancestral estates.

Meanwhile Evelyn Brierly grew to be a handsome woman. The face of the highwayman and the mysterious influence that had induced her to pledge him her heart in exchange for a glimpse of it never left her. The years went by, and he did not return to claim his own. Sometimes she dreaded he would and sometimes feared he would not. After awhile she began to think that he had suffered for his crimes on the gallows.

One October evening--it was Halloween--Evelyn stole out of her home and went across the fields to the river bank. The moon was but a few days old and was dividing the day and the night. Evelyn stood on the river bank among scattered trees and, raising a mirror she held in her hand, said aloud:

"Good moon, show me my future husband."

There was a sound of breaking twigs behind her, and a face appeared reflected in the glass. It was the well remembered face of the highwayman.

"Mistress Brierly," he said, "one night some years ago I gave you a sight of my face for your heart. To give you good measure I give you another sight of the same unworthy object."

Evelyn dropped the mirror and turned.

"The highwayman!" she exclaimed. "The repentant highwayman, formerly Walter Wheatleigh of Prince Rupert's army, then reduced to make a living on the road, now Earl of Portland."

"I did not know what I was saying," said the girl, turning away. The young earl caught her, saying:

"Nevertheless you said it, and I have come for my own."

Evelyn Brierly became Countess of Portland and for a short while a member of the court of King Charles. But the profligacy of the court soon drove her to her husband's home near Windsor, where she remained, living a somewhat secluded life with her husband and her children.

HUSBAND BOUGHT VINOL FOR WIFE

Mrs. Kerns Suffering from Nervous Breakdown Thought She Would Never Be Well Again, But Recovered.

So, Cumberland, Md.--"For a long time I suffered from a general nervous breakdown of the system, and thought I would never be strong again."

"My stomach troubled me so I could not eat, and sometimes I was so weak I was not able to do my housework. Finally my husband heard about Vinol and asked me to try it. After the first bottle I was greatly improved. I have now taken five bottles and it has done me a wonderful amount of good. I sleep soundly, am well and strong, and feel like a new woman and you may publish this for the benefit of every nervous, run-down man or woman who wants good health."--Mrs. D. W. KERNS, So. Cumberland, Md.

It is the combined action of the curative elements of the cods' livers, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol which makes it so efficient in restoring health and strength to weak, nervous, over-worked, run-down men and women.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding your money will be returned if it does not help you.
